

“On Love”

Love transcends reason, logic, and even common sense. Love is an overwhelming surge of warm emotion and feeling that bubbles up uncontrollably from the depths of your body and soul to render you exuberant or sad, strong or weak, bold or trembling. Love drives you to share or sacrifice everything you are or ever hope to be. Love compels you to caress softly, share a quiet word or thought, swear a totally unrestrained commitment to live for another special person (or die for them)... to offer somehow those same things you yourself crave. Love is sharing. Love is giving. A person who gives or receives no love is alone. Without sharing there is only anguish. Some have known true love, many never will – but all search for it, in their own way. Experience the pain of the search, or the joy of discovery, shared by people who may have already touched something we all have within us – but haven't yet recognized. Love is created first from within. Find it. Share it.
